

DOE's Idaho Operations Office Issues 2011-Beyond Strategic Plan

Manager Richard B. Provencher

I am pleased to announce the issuance of the Department of Energy's Idaho Operations Office (DOE-ID) FY 2011 and Beyond Strategic Plan. This plan ensures flow-down and alignment of national objectives to our federal and contractor staffs here in Idaho. We will use this Strategic Plan to accomplish both Department-wide and Idaho-specific goals, and we will hold ourselves accountable for doing just that.

DOE's Department-wide Strategic Plan, includes four main goals that support DOE's missions in energy, science and national security, through excellence in management. The DOE-ID Strategic Plan sets out objectives for ID and its contractors that support and align with the four Department-wide goals. ID's plan also establishes measurable outcomes to determine whether we are successful in meeting the mark when it comes to accomplishing the Department's mission.

In this time of tight budgets and uncertain energy futures, it is more important than ever to help our country achieve the President's goals related to sustainable energy independence. Idaho plays an integral role in these efforts, especially concerning the future production of safe and affordable nuclear energy, managing its byproducts, and improving technologies to ensure a pristine environment in the process. This DOE-ID Strategic Plan is our road map for getting there.
